For example: get_urls() -> #www.site.com/my_model/my_text_name This is my url: url(r'^mymodel/(?P[-w]+)/$', views.my_view) But, the server takes care of the character encoding of the id of the entity. The problem is when I receive that id through the url, the id has the wrong character encoding. What I'm doing: First, my url is like this: url(r'^mymodel/mytext/$', views.my_view) Then, in the views, I use the below lines to set the id to the id I received in the url: text_id = self.kwargs.get('mytext') instance.id = int(text_id) The problem is that it will keep the wrong encoding on the id, because the server encodes it. So, how can I encode the id of a url to the encoding of the url? Or, how can I convert the id of a url with a wrong encoding to a valid encoding? Thanks! A: Python has a builtin str.encode() function for encoding strings for use in URLs. The URLs seem to use Latin-1, but if you wanted to cater for other possible encodings then replace Latin-1 with the appropriate algorithm as explained in the Python standard library docs. A: In your view, you can decode the parameter from the encoded string and then re-encode it for
