There is much more to Photoshop than what is shown in this tutorial! There is a comprehensive manual that covers all aspects of the tool, including the most advanced features. Download the official Adobe Photoshop CS6 (CC) Student User Manual here: Q: Complexity Analysis of Word Search I have this problem that I can't understand and was wondering if I could get some guidance with it. The Problem is (pseudo code here): Given a word search puzzle, whether it is solved or not. We take a square grid, and number the squares starting from top-left. Then we fill up all the squares. No empty squares. The objective is to find a solution, that means we fill up all the cells with letters to form a word. For example (en.wikipedia entry): grid = [4, 1, 2, 0, 5] // 4 * 4 grid, all zeros grid.fillup("abracadabra") // No solution. Note: the order of the letters is irrelevant. A: Your problem can be solved in linear time by the quadratic-time algorithm given in this paper. If a word is solvable, it can be easily be verified by running your algorithm (one at a time) through all possible arrangements of the letters on the board. If a word is not solvable, then there is no solution. In that case, you can easily verify it by checking if you have filled up all the cells in the top-left-most cell. (In the case of a rectangular board, this is equivalent to checking that the product of the grid coordinates is 0). In other words, there is a cell that you haven't filled and there is no way of filling the cell without a contradiction. Dependency and pleasure:
